FROM THE PUBLISHER

A magazine for the time you spend waiting

Falmouth already gathers in waiting rooms, hotel lobbies, the Chamber, and the library. This magazine is for that time.

Falmouth Wellness Discovery is a quarterly health and wellness magazine with a fold-out discovery map. We print 1,000 copies and place them free. Winter 2026 is the founding issue, and this digital flipbook is a preview of that issue.

The pages follow four pillars: Mind, Body, Soul, and Health & Food. Stories are written from interviews. Open spots are marked as available and link to the partner page.

The printed magazine is letter size, made from 11×17 sheets. Tear out the walking-map sheet: the front is the wellness map, with partner boxes around the edge, and the back is a Falmouth visitor guide. On a wide screen those two sides open as landscape spreads.

Come by Cape Island Café at 316 Gifford Street if you want to talk about a story or a partnership. The phone is (774) 247-5263 and the email is CapeIslandCafe@gmail.com.

FEATURED BUSINESS

Tanorama, nearly three decades on Main Street

Nearly three decades of tanning at 365 Main Street.

Tanorama is a tanning salon at 365 Main Street, Falmouth. Owner Scott has kept the business on Main Street for nearly three decades.

This spread is where the interview sits: how the shop fits the winter town, who comes in, and what Scott wants readers to know.

The finished story will run beside the salon's own ad, after Scott signs off on the words.

Tanorama, continued

The salon is one of the longest-running shops on Main Street. Look for pin 12 on the walking map, a short walk east of the library.

The conversation with Scott runs here once he signs off on the words.

CIVIC · EXPLAINER

Where will the new police station go?

Why 100 Brick Kiln Road is in question, and what the Select Board asked for next.

Falmouth planned to build its new police station, and a wastewater lift station for the sewer project, on town land at 100 Brick Kiln Road. An outside legal opinion from the Boston firm Anderson & Kreiger found the parcel is likely protected under Article 97 of the Massachusetts Constitution, because the town used $1.5 million from its Land Bank fund toward the 2003 purchase. Land protected that way cannot be put to another use without meeting legal requirements that include a two-thirds vote of the state Legislature.

On Friday, October 9, the Select Board voted unanimously to release the opinion. Board members said they would prefer town staff to prioritize finding another location for the police station rather than pursue a long effort to clear the restrictions. The town asked its design consultant, Tecton Architects, to update cost estimates for alternative sites and for a one- or two-year delay.

About 35% of the $5.15 million Town Meeting set aside in November 2025 for police station design and project management, roughly $2.58 million, had been spent as of the meeting. Board member Douglas C. Brown noted that much of the architectural work could carry over to another site. Work on the lift station, a separate $16.7 million contract about a quarter complete, was continuing while its legal status is reviewed.

TO WATCH

What happens next

Staff are comparing town-owned and private sites, from flat parcels of about five acres to smaller sites that would need more redesign. Select Board agendas and minutes are posted on falmouthma.gov.

SOUL · PETS

Good dogs, good neighbors

A volunteer-led shelter partner and a free dog park built by the community.

Since 1990, Friends of Falmouth Dogs has made sure the town's stray and surrendered dogs are rehomed rather than forgotten. Founded by residents who started by walking dogs and raising money, the volunteer-led nonprofit now works with the Town of Falmouth to give every dog in the shelter system daily exercise, enrichment and care, and to match each one with the right family.

The help reaches owners too. Adopters and neighbors describe vouchers for vet care when money was tight, and support for owners during emergencies. Volunteers walk and socialize dogs, foster those who need a calmer place to recover, and help at events.

Once a dog is home, it needs somewhere to run. The Falmouth Dog Park at 257 Brick Kiln Road in East Falmouth is free, handicap-accessible and open from dawn to 8 p.m., with an all-dog area, a small-dog area and a time-out area for nervous newcomers. It is a nonprofit that runs on donations and volunteers, not town money, and it is looking for new board members.
